The Faculty of Engineering is offering a scholarship to outstanding students from the Middle East and North Africa to support their PhD in engineering or computer science at the University of Sydney.

Benefits:
The University of Sydney will provide:

• Tuition fees and a living allowance of AUD $37.2k per year, up to 3.5 years.
• High quality supervision, research training and professional development opportunities
• Funding opportunities to publish your research and present at high-impact conferences

Eligibility:
Applicants will be expected to have:

• Strong grades in a relevant discipline to their proposed area of research
• Personal attributes including motivation, curiosity, attention to detail and the ability to collaborate

About the Faculty:
The University of Sydney is ranked in the world’s top 60 universities for engineering and computer science. It is ranked first in Australia and fifth globally for graduate employability.

The Faculty’s multidisciplinary research aims to engineer solutions to global problems through our Digital Sciences Initiative and Net Zero Initiative and focuses on the areas of:

• Biomedical engineering and technologies;
• Complex systems and project management
• Data science and computer engineering;
• Energy, resources and the environment;
• Food product, process and supply chain;
• Infrastructure and transport;
• Robotics and intelligent systems; and
• Telecommunications and the Internet of Things.

The Faculty of Engineering comprises of seven schools, 18 research centres, as well as four multidisciplinary initiatives.

sydney.edu.au/engineering

Applications and Selection Process
Complete the Expression of Interest form here: https://tinyurl.com/5bn8j6nm
Make sure you upload an up-to-date CV and your most recent transcripts

Expressions of interest will be reviewed taking into account your grades, research experience and compatibility with our research projects. We particularly encourage applications from female students and under-represented groups.

Successful candidates will be invited to submit a formal application for admission.